The community of Stoughton began when Luke Stoughton, a Vermont Yankee from the Janesville area, purchased 800 acres of land nestled in a large bend of the Catfish (the Yahara River), on July 3, 1847. He platted the town, built a dam, lumber mill, general store and began to publicize his community to relatives and friends. The community grew steadily, and in 1853, Luke Stoughton offered free land to the railroad if it would stop in Stoughton. The railroad's presence assured the city's future prosperity, and made it a center for agriculture.

By 1868, when Stoughton became an incorporated village, the population had grown to 1,000, with most citizens being of Yankee descent. Most of the town lay between the railroad tracks. The community's economic base was still agricultural. After the Civil War, however, a manufacturing economy began to develop, with T.G. Mandt's Wagon Works becoming the most important industry. A second wagon works was opened, and by World War I, 800 men were employed. At the same time, leaf tobacco became the important crop, with hundreds of people, many of them women, employed in the seventeen tobacco warehouses in town.

The principal source of labor for Stoughton's industries was the pool of Norwegian immigrants who arrived starting in the 1870's. Probably attracted to the area by the well-established Norwegian farming community east of town, they transformed Stoughton into one of the Norwegian towns in the country. Over 75% of the town was of Norwegian descent by the end of the century. The population swelled, and the years between 1885 and 1917 were boom years for Stoughton, with substantial growth in both commercial and residential development. In 1882, Stoughton incorporated as a city.

The end of World War I marked the end of Stoughton's boom years. The emergence of automobiles and tractors brought about the demise of the wagon factories. Tobacco depleted the soil, and that industry collapsed. Then, after lean years in the 1920's and 1930's, Stoughton experienced an economic upswing, as several major industries moved to the area. Today, the city continues to thrive, and the population has grown to over 12,000.

Stoughton AREA SCHOOL DISTRICT

The Stoughton Area School District covers approximately 95 square miles and provides comprehensive educational services to 3,600 students in our three elementary schools, two middle schools and one high school. The district additionally provides a full spectrum of special education services to students with disabilities.

Approximately 80% of Stoughton students enroll in some form of post secondary education. Nine school board members are elected at large for three-year terms. One third of the Board is elected annually.

The Stoughton Area School District is a charter member of the Four Lakes Distance Education Consortium. This consortium of school districts, universities, private colleges and technical schools deliver coursework over a fiber optic system that allows for fully interactive voice, video and data transmissions. Students have the ability to take courses like Japanese, Latin, calculus and advanced Spanish over the network.

The district has made a considerable commitment to provide all students with the technological skills necessary for success in today's high tech world. A wide area voice and data network interconnects the six district buildings as well as the city library, the Stoughton Youth Center and two private schools in town.

Student computers are distributed in labs, library/media centers as well as modules within the classrooms. Teachers are provided with staff development opportunities to ensure that the technology tools are fully integrated throughout the instructional program.

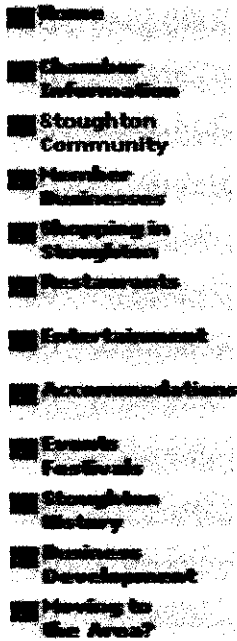

Students have a wide range of opportunities to explore interests through a variety of extra curricular activities. Choosing from a total of 50 different high school offerings in academic, athletic, and musical activities; a majority of students participate in the extra curricular offerings. Extra curricular activities are also provided to middle school students.

There is a definite sense of community that is ever present in Stoughton. The Stoughton Area School District reflects this sense of community through an ongoing partnership with the variety of community groups.

The school district is an active partner in the Joining Forces For Families initiative that defines positive activities and social services for children. This collaboration resulted in the Stoughton Youth Center, a model program that provides after-school and weekend activities for community youth.

The World Famous Stoughton High School Norwegian Dancers play a prominent role in the community's annual Norwegian celebration, Syttende Mai. This talented group of high school students typifies the collaboration of the schools and community.

Things To Do

Stoughton is the place for fun for the whole family! We can offer something to do out, every season of the year. There are sports clubs and activities for all ages, residents participating in local, area, and state-wide competitions. There are sports programs in the schools, and our city Recreation Department offers programs for all ages.

The City of Stoughton Parks and Recreation Department operates 13 city playgrounds. It sponsors a variety of recreational activities for adults and children leagues for youth baseball, girl's softball, adult and youth basketball, tennis and The high school has facilities for adult swimming and weightlifting.

The new Mandt Community Center is a 37,500 square foot facility that is utilized from October to April for youth and high school hockey, tournaments, figure skating and ice skating. The remaining months of the year see activities such as commercial events, fairs and expositions.

Within easy commute from Stoughton area are all the recreational, cultural, educational and commercial attractions of Dane County and the City of Madison. Residents can enjoy golf, fishing, boating, hiking, camping, theater, art & culture, museum, musical events, festivals, fairs, exotic restaurants and upscale shopping.

City Parks

Stoughton has thirteen city parks filled with swings, tennis courts, baseball and softball diamonds, swimming facilities and greenspace.
